Paladin Labs Inc. Announcement

Leadership Talking Points and Q&A

To Endo Leadership:

As leaders of our company, you will play a critical role in helping us communicate with our employees about our proposed acquisition of Paladin Labs and its benefits. Below is a set of talking points to assist you in communicating with your direct reports. We have also included select questions and answers to help guide you in responding to employee inquiries.

Talking Points

The acquisition of Paladin Labs represents an exciting next step in our long-term growth strategy.

Paladin Labs is a highly successful specialty pharmaceutical company based in Montreal, Canada, and the transaction creates a compelling financial and operational platform that will allow us to accelerate our transformation from an integrated healthcare solutions provider to a leading global specialty healthcare company.

Paladin's proven Canadian franchise, robust near-term pipeline, and emerging market presence (Latin America and South Africa) complement our existing strengths, enabling us to directly commercialize our future products in Canada utilizing Paladin's outstanding sales organization.

Paladin's focused strategy, stable and growing cash flows, and talented employee base have contributed to them rapidly becoming one of Canada's most successful and profitable publicly traded pharmaceutical companies.

With over 60 marketed drugs, proven sales and marketing capabilities, and strong partnerships with leading global pharmaceutical companies, Paladin has a track record of enhancing the performance of existing and newly acquired products. Key products serve growing therapeutic categories, including ADHD, pain management, urology and allergy. Additionally, Paladin has a promising pipeline of development products that are expected to drive future growth.

Following the completion of the transaction, Paladin's current operations and headquarters will remain in Montreal, Canada.

Endo will continue to be led by our management team and Paladin will be a separate operating entity led by Mark Beaudet, its current President, who will report directly to Rajiv upon the close of the transaction.

The transaction is expected to close in the first half of 2014.

A feature of this transaction is the ultimate re-domiciling of the Endo parent company in Ireland. This action allows us to create a compelling platform for future growth.

As we showed with our third quarter earnings, the transformation of Endo is well underway, and our sharpened strategic focus, improved execution within our core businesses and lean operating model are already producing results.

Strategic acquisitions like that of Paladin will continue to play a key role in our growth going forward as we seek to maximize our potential, create value for our shareholders and continue to innovate products that make a difference in the lives of patients.

This means more and exciting new opportunities for Endo and Paladin employees as we look to build one of the leading companies in our industry.

Employee Q&A

1. How will this affect me? Will there be layoffs? When can I expect more information?

As always, we are committed to keeping our employees well informed. This is a highly complementary transaction that diversifies our geography and product portfolio and creates a platform for future growth; Endo's employee count will not be affected by this transaction, and it is important for all of us to remain focused on meeting the needs of our customers.

2. How long will the integration process take? Who will lead the integration?

We intend to manage the Paladin business as a separate entity. As a result, the integration process will be a focused one and we anticipate that the integration process will be complete within 6 months post close. We have not yet made a decision on who will lead the integration process.

3. How will the new corporate structure affect my relationships with customers?

There will not be any change in our relationships with customers.

4. Will this transaction affect my job?

This is a highly complementary deal that opens up many future growth opportunities for Endo and our people. We do not expect major changes as a result of this transaction. However keep in mind that as we expand our business we will continually look for ways to optimize how we function in meeting the needs of our customers, patients and shareholders.

5. What should I tell customers if they ask about the deal?

Customers can expect us to provide the same level of exceptional service as always. Please direct important customer questions to the appropriate business unit leader.

6. Will we have to reorganize our sales forces as a result?

Paladin does not have any US field force, therefore we do not expect any changes to the sales organization.

7. If I own Endo stock, what happens to my stock?

Current Endo shareholders will receive one share of New Endo for each share of Endo they own at closing.

8. Will my personal income taxes be affected by the Company's proposed domiciling in Ireland? Why are we doing that, and what does that mean for us going forward? Are we now an Irish company and not a US company?

Re-domiciling in Ireland allows us to create a compelling and more flexible platform for future growth. After the closing, our parent company will be an Irish company and our operating companies will remain in the jurisdictions in which they currently operate. Your personal income taxes will not be affected by the parent company re-domiciling in Ireland. For those of you who are shareholders of Endo, we do not currently expect the transaction, as structured, to be taxable to U.S. shareholders of Endo. However, the ultimate tax treatment of the transaction is not certain, could be affected by actions taken by the company and other events, and cannot be determined until the end of the year in which the transaction is completed which the company expects will be 2014.

9. What will happen to the Endo name?

At this time, our customers, patients, and employees will see no difference in the Endo name and logo. For now, it is business as usual.

10. Where do I go if I have additional questions?

If you have additional questions or comments, please speak with your respective Executive Leadership Team (ELT) member. We will plan to provide additional information to you in the coming weeks.
