Pioneer Floating Rate Trust | Semiannual Report | 5/31/16 1

President's Letter

Dear Shareowner,

The first half of 2016 has featured some remarkable twists and turns in the global economy. The year began on shaky footing as surging market volatility brought about by fears of weaker global economic growth as well as falling oil prices depressed returns for investors. In the US, both equity and fixed-income markets declined significantly through the first six weeks of the year, only to recover the losses by the end of the first quarter when market sentiment shifted, due in part to accommodative monetary policies from the world's central banks.

Midway through the first quarter, for example, the US Federal Reserve System (the Fed) backed off plans to raise interest rates four times in 2016, and the European Central Bank announced a more comprehensive asset-purchasing program in the hopes of encouraging lending, and boosting both inflation and economic growth. The markets responded with a solid rally. By the end of May, in fact, US equities, as measured by the Standard & Poor's 500 Index, had generated a solid year-to-date (YTD) return of 3.55%, and the YTD return (as of 5/31/16) of the Barclays Aggregate Bond Index, a common measure of the US fixed-income market, was 3.45%.

As markets began to settle down, the Brexit vote - the vote confirming that the United Kingdom (UK) would exit the European Union (EU) - surprised many, and the rollercoaster ride began once again. The market sold off sharply in the first few days after the vote, then rallied as investors sought bargains created by the initial post-Brexit sell-off, and as more, less ominous information about the implications of the Brexit results came to light.

From a macroeconomic perspective, Pioneer believes the negative economic impact of Brexit on the US should be more limited compared with its effects on the UK and Europe. However, we expect reduced global demand due to a higher level of uncertainty and risk aversion among investors. While the spillover effects on the US economy are unclear, we think it possible that, in the event of a significant negative economic impact, the Fed might consider other monetary policy options. Globally, we believe that central banks are ready to act and that their initial focus will be to stabilize the markets and provide liquidity, if needed.

While the Brexit vote is now official, the expectation is that the actual process of separating the UK from the EU could take at least two years. Only in the next several months may we begin to see signs of what path Europe will follow as it adapts to the reality of an EU without one of its most prominent members. Over the medium-term, however, we believe uncertainties over the future of Europe and central banks' reactions will likely dominate financial markets, and we believe the news flow surrounding Brexit will continue to weigh on riskier assets. Competing for headlines, too, is the current financial condition of many European banks. Ultimately, we think that the political and monetary policy responses will be the major variables when it comes to managing an orderly Brexit. In addition, as the second half of 2016 gets underway, we continue to see central bank policies as generally supportive of the US economy -- for which we maintain an expectation of modest growth this year.

Aside from the Brexit-caused uncertainties, economies around the world in both developed and emerging markets are experiencing deep structural changes. Current challenges include incomplete debt deleveraging in both emerging and developed markets, where debt levels continue to grow, the transition of many emerging markets economies from export/investment-driven models to more domestic demand-driven models, and aging populations, which are reducing productivity and limiting economic growth potential (primarily in the developed markets but also in emerging markets such as China). Geopolitical instability on many fronts, the rising risk of policy mistakes, and market liquidity issues combine to increase the possibility of sharp swings in asset values. Meanwhile, in the US, as always in a presidential election year, the political rhetoric of 2016 has the potential to impact domestic sectors such as health care.

Throughout Pioneer's history, we have believed in the importance of active management. During periods of market volatility, we view the value of active management as even more compelling. Our experienced and tenured investment teams focus on identifying value across global markets using proprietary research, careful risk management, and a long-term perspective. We believe our shareowners can benefit from the experience and tenure of our investment teams as well as the insights generated from our extensive research process.

As always, and particularly during times of market uncertainty, we encourage you to work with your financial advisor to develop an overall investment plan that addresses both your short— and long-term goals, and to implement such a plan in a disciplined manner.

We greatly appreciate the trust you have placed in us and look forward to continuing to serve you in the future.

Sincerely,

/s/ Lisa M. Jones

Pioneer Floating Rate Trust | Semiannual Report | 5/31/16 3

Portfolio Management Discussion | 5/31/16

Floating-rate bank loan investments rallied over the latter half of the six-month period ended May 31, 2016, which resulted in the asset class producing healthy, positive returns for the full six months. In the following interview, Jonathan Sharkey discusses the factors that affected the performance of Pioneer Floating Rate Trust during the six-month period. Mr. Sharkey, a senior vice president and a portfolio manager at Pioneer, is responsible for the day-to-day management of the Trust.

- Q How did the Trust perform during the six-month period ended May 31, 2016?
- A Pioneer Floating Rate Trust returned 3.60% at net asset value and 6.59% at market price during the six-month period ended May 31, 2016, while the Trust's benchmark, the Barclays US High Yield Loans Index (the Barclays Index), returned 3.81% at net asset value. Unlike the Trust, the Barclays Index does not use leverage. While the use of leverage increases investment opportunity, it also increases investment risk. During the same six-month period, the average return (at market price) of the 22 closed end funds in Lipper's Loan Participation Funds category (which may or may not be leveraged) was 7.60%.

The shares of the Trust were selling at a 9.41% discount to net asset value on May 31, 2016.

The Trust's standard, 30-day SEC yield was 5.37% at the end of the sixmonth period on May 31, 2016*.

Q How would you describe the investment environment for bank loans during the six-month period ended May 31, 2016?

It was a difficult market for floating-rate bank loans - as well as for credit-sensitive investments in general - over the first half of the six-month period. The challenging environment that predominated for most of 2015 persisted, an environment in which credit-sensitive investments had fallen into disfavor amid growing investor worries about the health of the world economy. Several factors drove the downturn in the prices of credit-sensitive securities, including falling prices of oil and other basic commodities, evidence of slowing economic growth in China, and a resurgent debt crisis in Greece that raised concerns about the prospects for the wider European economy.

Given that backdrop, floating-rate loans, as measured by the Barclays Index, posted negative total returns over the first half of the six-month period (from December 2015 through February 2016). In March, however, loan

- * The 30-day SEC yield is a standardized formula that is based on the hypothetical annualized earning power (investment income only) of the Trust's portfolio securities during the period indicated.
- 4 Pioneer Floating Rate Trust | Semiannual Report | 5/31/16

prices bounced back sharply as oil prices stabilized and began to rise, with the recovery continuing over the following two months. News that the Chinese government's fiscal policies were becoming more accommodative in the hopes of spurring economic growth also buoyed the loan market, as did the more dovish stance adopted by the US Federal Reserve System (the Fed) - at least for the short term - with regard to further tightening of domestic monetary policy. The Fed began its tightening cycle by raising the Federal funds rate by 0.25% in December of 2015, but then indicated a more cautious approach as the global economy and the capital markets got off to a rocky start in early 2016.

After losing ground in the first half of the period, the Trust's benchmark, the Barclays Index, generated a 6.12% return over the final three months, and finished the six months with a return of 3.81%.

- Q Which of your investment decisions had the biggest effects on the Trust's benchmark-relative performance during the six-month period ended May 31, 2016?
- Consistent with our traditional approach of favoring a somewhat higher-quality portfolio in comparison with the makeup of the Barclays Index, the Trust's return at net asset value outperformed the benchmark during the market decline from December through February, but slightly lagged the benchmark's return during the rally in the second half of the period. Over the first five months of 2016, single B-rated loans in the Barclays Index have returned almost 1.25% more than those rated BB, while credits rated CCC have returned roughly 6.25% more than BBs. These figures underscore how lower-quality "risk-on" assets have outperformed the rest of the loan market of late, a factor that detracted from the Trust's benchmark-relative performance in the second half of the six-month period.

The biggest positive contributors to the Trust's absolute performance during the period were holdings in consumer cyclicals and consumer non-cyclicals. On the other hand, holdings in the insurance and energy sectors detracted from the Trust's returns. Energy loans benefited from increases in oil prices only toward the end of the period, thus limiting the positive offset to energy's poor performance earlier in the period.

In comparison with the Barclays Index, the Trust's modest overweights to the industrials and basic industries sectors, and a moderate overweight to capital goods made the largest positive contributions to benchmark-relative performance during the six-month period. Security selection drove the Trust's better benchmark-relative performance in the industrials and basic industries sectors, while sector allocation/weighting drove stronger relative performance in capital goods.

Pioneer Floating Rate Trust | Semiannual Report | 5/31/16 5

The biggest detractors from the Trust's benchmark-relative performance during the period were moderate underweights to technology, consumer cyclicals, and communications (broadcasting, papers, cable, telecom). In addition to the underweight allocations, security selection results also detracted from the Trust's benchmark-relative performance in both consumer cyclicals and communications.

In other asset classes, the Trust's performance was helped by the portfolio's allocations to high-yield corporate bonds, equities, and event-linked bonds issued by property casualty insurers (each asset class representing less than 2% of the Trust's total Investment portfolio).

Individual positions in the portfolio that detracted from the Trust's benchmark-relative performance during the period included loans to energy corporations EP Energy, a gas company that has felt the effects of low natural gas prices, and Dixie Electric, which provides electrical services to oil-drilling rigs. Other underperformers that detracted from benchmark-relative results included loans to Endemol, a producer of reality television shows, and to managed-care health insurer Medical Card Systems.

Individual positions that aided the Trust's benchmark-relative returns during the six-month period included loans to Securus, a telephone company specializing in service to prisons and other correctional facilities; to Fortescue, an iron-ore mining corporation; to Jonah Energy, an oil and gas production company; and to Laureate, a for-profit higher-education corporation.

- Q How did the level of leverage in the Trust change over the six-month period ended May 31, 2016?
- A The Trust employs leverage through a revolving credit facility. (See Note 7 to the financial statements).

At the end of the 6-month period on May 31, 2016, 32.0% of the Trust's total managed assets were financed by leverage (or borrowed funds), compared with 33.1% of the Trust's total managed assets financed by leverage at the start of the period on December 1, 2015. During the 6-month period, the Trust reduced the borrowing from the credit facility by a total of $7 million to $143 million as of May 31, 2016. Due to the overall decline in prices of bank loans during the period, a reduction in the overall borrowing on the credit line was necessary in order to maintain the asset coverage requirements specified by the credit agreement. The percentage of the Trust's managed assets financed by leverage decreased during the period due to the reduction of borrowings.

- 6 Pioneer Floating Rate Trust | Semiannual Report | 5/31/16
- Q Did the Trust invest in any derivative securities during the six-month period ended May 31, 2016? If so, did those investments have an effect on performance?

- A Yes, the Trust had a small exposure to Markit CDX (a high-yield credit-default-swap index) during the period. We made the investment to increase portfolio liquidity, and the position did not have a material impact on the Trust's benchmark-relative performance.
- Q What factors affected the Trust's distributions to shareholders during the six-month period ended May 31, 2016?
- A The Trust's distributions remained stable during the six-month period. Shareholders should be aware, however, that the Trust's distributions could be negatively affected as older loans with higher yields are called back by issuers and subsequently refinanced by loans with lower yields. In addition, the Trust drew on accumulated net investment income in paying its dividend during the period, but these reserves will be depleted over time.
- Q What is your investment outlook?
- As the second half of the Trust's fiscal year began in early June, investors keenly awaited two events likely to have an effect on the overall bond market: the referendum vote on "Brexit," to determine whether the UK should leave the European Union, and the Fed's next move with regard to interest rates. The subsequent vote in support of Brexit that occurred after period end has added volatility to the market, although we do not expect it to have a major, longer-term effect on the domestic bank-loan market. In early June, the Fed put off any immediate tightening of monetary policy in the US when it left the Federal funds rate unchanged in the wake of a disappointing May jobs report. In that report, the US Department of Labor reported that monthly non-farm payrolls had increased by just 38,000 in May, a stark difference from the 160,000 increase anticipated by the markets.

It appears the current market consensus is that the Fed will likely act cautiously, perhaps raising rates only once or twice during the remainder of 2016, with any actions to tighten monetary policy based on the US central bank's assessment of the strength of the domestic economy.

Despite getting off to a slow start in the first quarter, during which gross domestic product (GDP) growth fell short of 1%, we still believe US GDP should be able to grow at a moderate pace of 2.00% to 2.25% in 2016. Poor sales figures and a slowdown in capital spending – both tied to weakness in the energy markets – played a role in the disappointing GDP numbers in the first quarter; however, we still see persuasive evidence that the domestic economy is strengthening. Even after the sluggish employment numbers for May, new-job creation continues and employment growth has been solid overall. (May's job numbers were eventually revised even lower, to 11,000, but the picture was much rosier in June, as the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that non-farm payrolls increased by a seasonally adjusted 287,000 for the month.) Meanwhile, household formation and new-home construction figures have been encouraging, and we are beginning to see early signs of wage inflation.

While interest-rate hikes tend to be a problem for fixed-rate securities in general, they can actually lead to improved performance for floating-rate securities, as their rates can reset upward. In addition, floating-rate loans, at current prices, have the potential for price appreciation. Currently, about two-thirds of all floating-rate loans are priced either at discounts to par (face) value, or at par value. We believe the prices of these securities have the opportunity to move higher, especially given the shortage of new-loan supply in today's market.

Going forward, we will continue to monitor carefully the factors that can affect the performance of floating-rate investments, including supply and demand, the strength of the economy, and the interest-rate outlook. We continue to believe floating-rate loans, at current prices, offer attractive investment value, especially when compared with more traditional income-oriented investment alternatives, such as bond funds, which are more vulnerable to price pressures in a rising-rate environment.

Please refer to the Schedule of Investments on pages 13-41 for a full listing of Trust securities.

All investments are subject to risk, including the possible loss of principal. In the past several years, financial markets have experienced increased volatility, depressed valuations, decreased liquidity, and heightened uncertainty. These conditions may continue, recur, worsen, or spread.

The Trust may invest in derivative securities, which may include futures and options, for a variety of purposes, including: in an attempt to hedge against adverse changes in the marketplace of securities, interest rates or currency exchange rates; as a substitute for purchasing or selling securities; to attempt to increase the Trust's return as a non-hedging strategy that may be considered speculative; and to manage portfolio characteristics. Using derivatives can increase fund losses and reduce opportunities for gains when the market prices, interest rates or the derivative instruments themselves behave in a way not anticipated by the Trust. These types of instruments can increase price fluctuation.

The Trust is not limited in the percentage of its assets that may be invested in floating-rate senior loans and other securities which may be less liquid or illiquid. Illiquid securities may be difficult to sell at a price reflective of their value at times when the Trust believes it is desirable to do so and the market price of illiquid securities is generally more volatile than that of more liquid securities. Illiquid securities may be difficult to value, and investment of the Trust's assets in illiquid securities may restrict the Trust's ability to take advantage of market opportunities.

8 Pioneer Floating Rate Trust | Semiannual Report | 5/31/16

The Trust employs leverage through a revolving credit facility. Leverage creates significant risks, including the risk that the Trust's income or capital appreciation from investments purchased with the proceeds of leverage will not be sufficient to cover the cost of leverage, which may adversely affect the return for shareowners.

The Trust is required to maintain certain regulatory and other asset coverage requirements in connection with its use of leverage. In order to maintain required asset coverage levels, the Trust may be required to reduce the amount of leverage employed by the Trust, alter the composition of its investment portfolio or take other actions at what might be inopportune times in the market. Such actions could reduce the net earnings or returns to shareowners over time, which is likely to result in a decrease in the market value of the Trust's shares.

Investments in high-yield or lower-rated securities are subject to greater-than-average risk. The Trust may invest in securities of issuers that are in default or that are in bankruptcy.

Investing in foreign and/or emerging markets securities involves risks relating to interest rates, currency exchange rates and economic and political conditions.

These risks may increase share price volatility.

Any information in this shareholder report regarding market or economic trends or the factors influencing the Trust's historical or future performance are statements of opinion as of the date of this report. Past performance is no quarantee of future results.

Performance data shown represents past performance. Past performance is no guarantee of future results. Investment return and market price will fluctuate, and your shares may trade below NAV, due to such factors as interest rate changes, and the perceived credit quality of borrowers.

Total investment return does not reflect broker sales charges or commissions. All performance is for shares of the Trust.

Shares of closed-end funds, unlike open-end funds, are not continuously offered. There is a one-time public offering and, once issued, shares of closed-end funds are bought and sold in the open market through a stock exchange and frequently trade at prices lower than their NAV. NAV per share is total assets less total liabilities, which include preferred shares, or borrowings, as applicable, divided by the number of shares outstanding.

When NAV is lower than market price, dividends are assumed to be reinvested at the greater of NAV or 95% of the market price. When NAV is higher, dividends are assumed to be reinvested at prices obtained through open-market purchases under the Trust's dividend reinvestment plan.

The performance table and graph do not reflect the deduction of fees and taxes that a shareowner would pay on Trust distributions or the sale of Trust shares. Had these fees and taxes been reflected, performance would have been lower.

Index returns are calculated monthly, assume reinvestment of dividends and, unlike Trust returns, do not reflect any fees, expenses or sales charges. The indices do not use leverage. You cannot invest directly in an index.
