Chairman and Chief Executive Officer

December 2006

Dear Mercantile Associates,

When plans were announced to merge Mercantile and PNC in October, I had a very good feeling about the future of our combined organization. Over the years, I had learned a great deal about the outstanding record of growth and performance that the Mercantile team has compiled. In that time, two characteristics always stood out: your relentless commitment to exceptional customer service, and your close involvement with the communities served by the Mercantile family of affiliate banks. I know that consistent success on those two fronts requires strong core values.

Through various visits and interactions over the last two months, I have had an opportunity to witness how the Mercantile team truly lives those values. In addition to being very impressed, I am even more excited about the opportunities that lie ahead. Why? Because PNC has delivered similar success through a commitment to similar core values. Although the words are not identical, the underlying sentiments are closely tied: PNC keeps the customer at the forefront of everything it does; employees work as a team to meet customer needs effectively; and these goals are accomplished by maintaining high business and ethical standards and the utmost integrity.

Our common values serve as a strong indication that our two organizations will mesh well together. And the Mercantile and PNC teams continue to discover other complementary strengths as the integration process unfolds. Perhaps most important, both organizations strive to develop deep and lasting customer relationships. This requires a personal touch and keen insight by knowledgeable and experienced bankers as well as a strong support team's talents and capabilities that clearly distinguish Mercantile and PNC.

The teams have made significant progress in developing integration plans since the October announcement. I want to thank everyone at Mercantile who has contributed to this important work. I also appreciate the entire Mercantile team's ongoing focus on the customer as the significant effort to combine our organizations continues.

Though there is more to accomplish over the coming months, I trust that the coming weeks will include special moments with family and friends. So from the PNC family to everyone at Mercantile, please accept our best wishes for a happy, healthy and safe holiday season.

Sincerely,

The PNC Financial Services Group
