PART I

Item 1. Business

(a) General development of the business. Roadway Corporation (the Company or Roadway), a Delaware corporation, is a holding company that was formed on May 30, 2001 by a reorganization of the corporate structure of Roadway Express, Inc. In connection with the reorganization, Roadway Express, Inc. became a wholly owned direct subsidiary of Roadway Corporation. The Company's headquarters are at 1077 Gorge Boulevard, Akron, Ohio, 44310.

Roadway Express, Inc. (REX), a Delaware corporation founded in 1930, is the primary operating subsidiary of the Company. REX and its subsidiaries provide long-haul less-than-truckload (LTL) freight services on major city-to-city routes (lanes) in North America, and on international lanes to and from North America. Based on reported revenue for 2002, REX is one of the largest LTL motor carriers in the United States.

On November 30, 2001, Roadway acquired Arnold Industries, Inc. (Arnold) of Lebanon, Pennsylvania (NASDAQ: AIND) for $21.75 per share in cash, an aggregate consideration of approximately $560 million. Arnold's subsidiaries are New Penn Motor Express, a regional next-day LTL carrier, and Arnold Transportation Services (ATS), an irregular route truckload (TL) carrier. Arnold was renamed Roadway Next Day Corporation subsequent to the acquisition. On December 26, 2002, the Company entered into an agreement to sell ATS to a management group led by the unit's president and a private equity firm, for approximately $55 million. New Penn will continue to operate independently under its brand name. See Notes 3 and 4 to the Consolidated Financial Statements in Roadway's 2002 Annual Report to Shareholders, which are on pages 24-26 of Exhibit 13 of this filing, for more details regarding these transactions.

The abrupt Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection filing and cessation of operations on September 2, 2002 by Consolidated Freightways, one of Roadway Express' major competitors, resulted in increased freight levels for Roadway Express during the fourth quarter of 2002. On an annual basis, the increased freight levels in the fourth quarter nearly offset the effect of the slow economic recovery that we experienced in the first three quarters of 2002. The impact of the Consolidated Freightways shutdown is discussed in more detail in the Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations, which appears on pages 13-21 of Roadway's Annual Report to Shareholders for the year ended December 31, 2002, and is filed with this Form 10-K as pages 1-13 of Exhibit 13.

(b) Segment information. The information in Note 5 of the Consolidated Financial Statements on pages 29-31 of Roadway's Annual Report to Shareholders for the year ended December 31, 2002 is filed with this Form 10-K as pages 26-28 of Exhibit 13, and is incorporated herein by reference.

(c) Description of the business. REX provides transportation of general commodity freight by motor vehicle, in North America and elsewhere. General commodity freight includes apparel, appliances, automotive parts, chemicals, food, furniture, glass, machinery, metal and metal products, non-bulk petroleum products, rubber, textiles, wood, and miscellaneous manufactured products. REX also offers LTL service within Canada and Mexico through its subsidiaries, and offers import and export service for more than 100 additional countries worldwide through offshore agents. The Company serves over one-half million customer sites in North America. New Penn offers LTL service primarily in New England and the Middle Atlantic States.

Roadway is affected directly by the state of the overall economy, with over 90% of the Company's revenue is from customers operating in the following economic segments: manufacturing, 24%; wholesale trade, 24%; retail trade, 27%; and transportation and utilities, 16%. Seasonal fluctuations affect tonnage, revenue, and operating results. Normally, the fall of each year is the Company's busiest shipping period; the months of December and January of each year are the slowest. Shipment levels, operating costs, and operating results can also be adversely affected by inclement weather. During 2002, the largest customer accounted for 6% of the Company's total revenues, and the ten largest customers accounted for approximately 20% of the Company's total revenue.

The LTL business is extremely competitive, often resulting in narrow margins. REX and New Penn operate in different segments of the trucking market and do not compete with each other for business. Roadway's primary competitors in the national LTL market are Yellow Transportation, ABF Freight System, U.S. Freightways, and FedEx Freight. New Penn competes with a substantial number of regional carriers that operate in the same geographic area, some of which are larger than New Penn. Both companies also compete for LTL freight with other national and international LTL carriers as well as regional LTL motor carriers, truckload carriers, small package carriers, private carriage, freight forwarders, railroads and airlines. Competition for freight is based primarily upon price and service (transit time). To maintain and improve market share, Roadway offers and negotiates various discounts. Roadway works directly with customers on an account-by-account basis to find ways to improve efficiencies and contain costs to improve both customer and carrier profitability.

Deregulation of most of the trucking industry, begun in 1980 and largely completed by Congress in 1995, has given rise to intense competition. New entrants, some of which have grown rapidly in regional markets, include some non-union carriers that may have lower labor costs than REX and New Penn.

During 2002, the Company's operating subsidiaries averaged 27,000 employees. Approximately 75% of the Company's employees are represented by various labor unions, primarily the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (the Teamsters). The current National Master Freight Agreement with the Teamsters expires on March 31, 2003. On February 6, 2003, the Company and the Teamsters announced that they had reached a tentative agreement on a new five-year contract. The Company believes that its current relations with the Teamsters are satisfactory.

The U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT), which retains limited oversight authority over motor carriers, currently regulates the Company's operations in interstate commerce. Federal legislation preempts regulation by the states of price, routes, and service in intrastate freight transportation. The Company, like other interstate motor carriers, is subject to certain safety requirements governing interstate operations prescribed by the DOT. The Company has earned a satisfactory rating (the highest of three grading categories) from the DOT. In addition, vehicle dimensions and driver hours of service remain subject to both Federal and state regulation. More restrictive limitations on vehicle weight and size, trailer length and configuration, or driver hours of service could adversely affect the operating results of the Company.

At December 31, 2002, REX operated a total of 10,000 tractors and 33,000 trailers. The average age of the intercity fleet was less than seven years. New Penn operates 800 tractors and 1,600 trailers. There is sufficient capacity to meet normal requirements. Short-term leased equipment is used to meet peak demands.

(e) Available Information. The Company's Internet address is www.roadwaycorp.com and the investor relations section of the Company's website is located at www.roadwaycorp.com/investors. The Company makes available free of charge, on or through the investor relations section of its website, annual reports on Form 10-K, quarterly reports on Form 10-Q and current reports on Form 8-K and amendments to those reports filed or furnished pursuant to Section 13(a) or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 as soon as reasonably practicable after the Company electronically files such material with, or furnishes it to, the Securities and Exchange Commission.
